ELECTION MONITOR NO. 22

NLD MEMBERS FORM NEW PARTY

Prominent members of the National League for Democracy (NLD) have decided to form a new party to contest the elections. It will be called the National Democratic Front (NDF) and is being founded by members who strongly voiced their disapproval of the NLD's decision to boycott the elections. Members include Dr. Than Nyein, Dr. Win Naing, U Sein Hla Oo and U Thein Nyunt who all served as active members of the now disbanded NLD. The newly formed party will consist of a 20-member Central Committee with Khin Maung Swe serving as advisor. The party has yet to register with the Election Commission and it is expected that other members of the NLD will become members of the NDF. The NDF and many of its leaders have reiterated that they are not opposing Daw Aung San Suu Kyi. However, they feel that it is important for them to continue their political activities even though the NLD has deemed the electoral process to be "unjust and unfair."<sup>1</sup>

NDF PARTY TO ALLY WITH PRO-DEMOCRACY, ETHNIC GROUPS

“Our unfinished duty is to bring peace, democracy and development to the people of Burma and for this cause we will work together with other political parties including ethnic parties,” said Than Nyein, a former NLD leader and leader of the newly created National Democratic Front (NDF). He went on to add that the NDF would not rush into political alliances and that his party would avoid contesting in ethnic areas to preserve the rights of ethnic political parties to manage their own affairs.<sup>4</sup>

USDP STEPS UP ELECTION CAMPAIGNING IN KACHIN STATE

The newly formed Union Solidarity and Development Party (USDP) after its recent name change and transformation from the Union Solidarity and Development Association (USDA) has begun entrusting Secretaries and Central Executive Committee (CEC) members of township USDA organisations in the Kachin State to carry out party organisational activities and election campaigns. According to a local resident, hard-core USDA members from Moe-nyin and Myitkyina districts in Kachin State have been given training on party organisational matters as well as lobbying and campaign tactics. At present the activities are being conducted in the various USDA township premises especially those located along the Myitkyina-Moe-gaung-Moe-nyin rail-track viewed to be a key and strategic area within Kachin State. Likely candidates tipped to run in Kachin state for the USDP include Thein Zaw (Minister for Posts, Telegraphs and Communications), Phone Swe (Deputy Minister for Home Affairs), San Pyei (Director, General of Border Trade Directorate), and Nyunt Aung (Director-General of Ministry of Industry (1)). Furthermore, nominations and selection of party members and executive committee members of the USDP party throughout the country is now underway and all State/Regional, District and Township Peace and Development Council level offices have been tasked to assist with the on-going process.<sup>5</sup>

USDP PREPARES TO COLLECT MEMBERSHIP FEES

The Union Solidarity and Development Party (USDP) will shortly start to compile lists of members and begin to collect party membership fees to provide for much needed campaign funds. Under the electoral laws, political parties are prohibited from taking assistance and financial support from the government. According to a USDP official, Rangoon, with an estimated population of 6.5 million, has 3.5 million USDA members. Thought to be the organization with the largest membership, the party plans to launch its fund raising campaign but has yet to determine the amount. Since its inception the USDA has been seen as a junta-backed social organization, and thus to eliminate all doubts or suspicion of the party's involvement with the regime, the decision was made to collect membership fees, said an official from Tarmway USDA.<sup>6</sup>

CHIN STATE USDP PROVIDED FUNDS TO BUILD PARTY OFFICE

USDP officials in Falam Township have been provided an estimated Kyat 1000 lakhs to build a new party office by the military regime. According to Ngun Lal, who is an USDP party nominee for Falam Township, "military authorities in Naypyitaw sanctioned the project and have entrusted Kawl Luai, Chairman of the USDP Falam Township, to carry out the project." The present USDP office in Falam is located in a private rented house, but after the organization converted to a political party, authorities immediately began constructing a new building in the heart of the Falam town.<sup>7</sup>

NOMINATION OF OFFICIALS TO SERVE ON ELECTION SUB-COMMISSION

Local authorities in Muse, Northern Shan State have been busy compiling the names of candidates who will serve as members of the Muse Election Sub-Commission in the upcoming elections. The eleven candidates nominated so far to serve on the Election Sub-Commission have been selected from Muse, Namkham and Khutkaing, Kyukok (Pangsai), Mongpaw, Mangho (Manghiro) and Tarmony Townships. According to the set-up of the election sub-commissions, Muse Township will be represented by four members, with the remaining townships represented by one official from each township. Two other remaining candidates, one from Seilant village in Muse Township and the other from Naung-taung village in Kyukok (Pangsai), will also be included in the Muse Election Sub-Commission. According to local residents, those who have been initially drafted to serve on the Muse Sub-Commission are thought to be non-locals - a move seen to be a way for the authorities to assert control and influence on the members of the sub-commission.<sup>8</sup>

ANALYSIS

After the 6 May deadline, the number of parties including newly established and re-registered parties has risen to 31. While the registration of new parties and election organisation continues day by day, the all important election date still remains a mystery.

The decision by the NLD not to re-register has put an end to its legal status. However, the news that some prominent members of the NLD led by Khin Maung Swe are planning to create a new party to be called the National Democratic Force (NDF) will be welcomed by many in the opposition parties, since the current election scene has been dominated by the regime-backed Union Solidarity and Development Party (USDP) and its ally, the National Unity Party (NUP). In his initial statement, Dr. Than Nyein, head of the new NDF party, stated that the party would explore the possibilities of forming alliances with other pro-democracy parties as well as ethnic parties. Should this become a reality, it could serve to strengthen the opposition. With the NLD removed from the political scene, the USDA or USDP will surge ahead.

A worrying trend is the total disregard the USDP and the SPDC have for their own constitution and election laws. First, the constitution prohibits civil servants from being members of political parties, but the USDP was formed by the serving Prime Minister and members of his cabinet. While ministers in other systems could argue that they are not civil servants, this is not the case in the Burmese system. All ministers are civil servants in one way or the other. They are not elected politicians. Next, while the Rangoon USDP members are trying to collect membership fees to show their independence from the government, the military hierarchy in Naypyidaw sanctioned $100,000 to build the new USDP Chin State headquarters in Falam. More seriously, State/Regional, District and Township level Peace and Development Councils across the country have been tasked to assist the USDP and the on-going electoral process. This does not bode well for the independence of the various Election Commissions and Sub-Commissions.
