MEP Langen said that Burma's recent moves toward democracy are "very impressive" and that "the decision to lift sanctions would be dependent on the way by-elections are held in April". He added that "the most important development would be to improve the lives of the people in Myanmar", as more than 50 per cent of population lives in rural areas, and they need infrastructure, water, technology, and investment. According to MEP Lochbihler it is important for the Burmese government to show that it can return the soldiers to the barracks and end decades of serious human rights abuses and fighting in ethnic areas across the country. However she noted that the EU delegation got the impression that Burmese members of Parliament take their jobs very seriously and want to represent their constituencies.<sup>7</sup>

- Judicial and Legal Affairs Committee Chairman Thura U Aung Ko (USDP) submitted a proposal “to amend The Arbitration (Protocol and Convention) Act (Act No.VI, 1937) (19th January, 1937).” The date for discussing U Aung Ko’s proposal would be announced at a later date.<sup>22</sup>

- the Union Election Bill was approved<sup>23</sup>

During the 10th day session, 8 questions were replied to, 1 proposal was discussed, 3 new proposals were submitted and discussed and 1 bill was introduced. The key issues were:

- U Than Tun of Depeyin Constituency (USDP) seconded the proposal to amend The Arbitration (Protocol and Convention) Act (Act No. VI, 1937) (19th January, 1939) and the Arbitration Act 1944 (Act No. IV, 1944) (1st March, 1946) submitted by the Judicial and Legal Affairs Committee on 29 February, citing that those laws were enacted before independence, and calling for amendments to them so as to be in line with internationally practiced provisions.
  - Deputy Attorney-General U Tun Tun Oo replied that arbitration is a method used to settle the arguments between the partners of business deals and unlike litigation, it is a way of settling the dispute with the help of arbitrators chosen by the both arguing sides. It is found that arbitration has been used since the time of Burmese monarchs.
  - Nowadays, there are three ways to go arbitration-free arbitration, court-supported arbitration, and allowing the arguing sides to choose registered arbitrators from arbitration centres.
  - The Arbitration Act 1944 was promulgated to assign arbitrators to settle the disputes between two sides either person or company off the court, matters related to death of a party and official representation of him, authority of arbitrators, dismissal of arbitrators, confirmation of the verdict of the arbitrators, change to the verdict, validation of the verdict at the related court in case of failure to follow the arbitrators’ verdict, and appeals.
  - Of those two existing laws, The Arbitration Act 1944 is no more compatible with developments of the current global commercial laws but is still a domestic law applicable for disputes between national investors.
  - That the arguing sides can go arbitration as they both desire is the basic of the arbitration and thus The Arbitration Act 1944 should not be rewritten but should remain a valid law with necessary amendments and Arbitration and Convention Act (Act No. VI/1937) should continue so that disputes between a Geneva Convention member and Burma can be settled in accordance with the Geneva Convention.
  - The Deputy Attorney-General seconded the proposal to keep The Arbitration Act 1944 in force after making necessary amendments and to join the New York Convention.<sup>24</sup>

At 14th day session 9 questions were raised and answered, 1 bill was submitted, 2 proposals were discussed, 1 proposal was postponed and 1 proposal approved. The key issues were:

- Daw Khin Waing Kyi of Yangon Region Constituency No. 1 (NDF) asked “whether there is plan to draft separate law for Myanmar Police Force”. The Union Minister for Home Affairs Lt-Gen Ko Ko responded that based on developments of the country, orders and directives will be issued if and when necessary.

The Union Minister for Home Affairs Lt-Gen Ko Ko responded:
  - o Maungtau district which shares 152-milelong border with other countries and many of those residing there are Bengalis.
  - o Communications and illegal marriages have taken place in the past, and citizens of the other countries have entered Myanmar through this process.
  - o During the Nagar-min Operation in 1978-79, aimed at collecting the official population and data of the region, those who could not stand the examination fled to the other country. Similarly also during the Hintha project, over 180,000 persons were re-accepted under agreement of the two countries. Over 230,000 persons were reaccepted till July, 2005, as those who fled to the other country for various reasons in 1990-1991 were reaccepted since 22-9-1992 under the agreement of the two countries.
  - o Thus, it is important to scrutinize and prevent such illegal activities, and as such Bengali nationals residing in Maungtau District are supervised to take Immigration Form-4 for traveling to other regions and states with the aim of scrutinizing them whether they are actually residing in the nation or not and preventing the infiltration of extremist terrorists into Burma under the law according to the State security and national cause;
  - o At present, traveling is being scrutinized to be easier than that of the past.
  - o With regard to issuance of the citizenship scrutiny cards, a citizen can be classified either as an inborn citizen or a citizen prescribed by the law. According to the Myanmar Citizenship Law 1982, any person may apply firm evidences showing residence of forefathers as original citizens in Burma so as to take identity card among three types of citizens as the citizen, the associate citizen and the naturalized citizen. Any person has responsibility to initially submit application for taking one type of card.
  - o With regard to wedding, as the Bengali nationals residing in Maungtau District are similar to language, physical characters and religion of those from other country, it is an act of identifying them not to wrongfully wed those of other countries and scrutinizing them whether they are really residing in the region, holding official household registration and reaching 18 years or not. Thus, departments concerned systematically cooperate with them for carrying out legal wedding. In the education sector, those in conformity with prescribed rules have the chance to attend any university/college, and likewise, any person in conformity with education entrance selection system of the respective ministries can enjoy the right of learning education at vocational universities.

- In accord with Section 348 of the Constitution, arrangements have been made for enabling the people of Maungtaw District to enjoy rights in equal term similar to those of entire country.
  - With regard to the question to accept the administration in the framework of the 2008 Constitution, any person residing in Burma must abide by the existing laws, rules, procedures, orders and directives before emergence of the Constitution. As Maungtaw District is a border area, the administration of Maungtaw District is legally contributing towards security and prevalence of law and order for the sake of the people so as to safeguard the sovereignty of the State.
- Dr Tin Shwe of Yangon Region constituency No 6 (NDF) asked the procedure being practiced by the ministry concerned on NGO registration. The Union Minister for Home Affairs Lt-Gen Ko Ko responded:
- NGOs, INGOs and private organizations had signed MoUs with the Ministry of National Planning and Economic Development (NPED) and with ministries concerned to work in the country and to date, 278 NGOs had been permitted of which 112 were township-level organizations and they were also rendering assistance to the members of the organizations and 74 had been taking measures for education, health and environmental conservations sectors while 92 organizations were providing assistance to orphans, welfare of pensioners and other services.
  - From a total of 53 INGOs from foreign countries, 6 organizations had been permitted by the Ministry of Home Affairs, and of the remaining 47 organizations, 38 had applied at the Ministry of NPED for registration.
  - The coordination and cooperation of the departments concerned and INGOs were aimed at serving to promote and protect the interests of the country.
  - Currently, INGO is required to submit the Project Proposal, Basic Agreement and MoU drafts to Ministry of National Planning and Economic Development and to ministries concerned and eventually sign the final agreement after being approved by the authorities concerned.
  - NGOs and INGOs are allowed to open their offices after registration, and need to seek agreements from the Ministry of National Planning and Economic Development and ministries concerned to appoint foreigners as well as the appointment local employees in the respective organizations.

  - There is no plan to take national census within 2012 after the by-elections.

FORMER NLD MEMBER TO RUN AGAINST PARTY

Residents of Meiktila are likely to be spoilt for choice in the 1 April by-elections with a former member of the National League of Democracy (NLD), Daw Myint Myint Aye, registering as an independent candidate. A long-time Meiktila resident, the 54-year-old was a member of the NLD since 1989 but cut ties with the party after it nominated a senior member from Yangon, U Win Htein, as its candidate for the Pyithu Hluttaw seat of Meiktila. The constituency had more than 195,000 registered voters in November 2010 and was won by U Thein Aung of the USDP with about 74% of all eligible votes. He was later elevated by the Union Government as Deputy Minister for Industry 1. Daw Myint Myint Aye responded to the snub by filing an application to the election commission to

ETHNIC NEWS JOURNAL THE UNITY TO LAUNCH IN MARCH

A journal focusing on news from the country’s ethnic-dominated regions is set to launch in March, several months later than originally planned. According to its editor-in-chief Ko Pyo Wai Lin “The Unity” was initially expected to hit news-stands in November last year, but it has taken eight months for the group’s publishing licence to be approved. He said that the name of the new publication also had to be changed from The Union, which was already registered by the Union Democratic Party. “We only changed the name. We will report politics and other ethnic news as we originally planned.” The 36-page journal will be published each Friday and is owned by three ethnic nationals, including U Sai Hla Kyaw, the General-Secretary of the Shan Nationalities Democratic Party and Pyithu Hluttaw representative for Langkho in Southern Shan State. Ko Pyo Wai said that most journals were focused on events in Bamar-dominated areas and gave less space to ethnic news.<sup>43</sup>

88 GENERATION CALLS FOR PEACE CONFERENCE

The 88 Generation group has called for a Panglong-style Peace Conference to permanently end political conflict between the government and armed ethnic groups. The group released a four-point statement following its 23 to 25 February trip to Kachin State, during which it met people displaced by fighting in the region as well as political, religious, social and business leaders. According to member Ko Mya Aye, a national peace conference was needed to guarantee equal rights for all ethnic groups. “Our ethnic brothers don’t think there have been any changes in Myanmar because there is war all the time. They think that they do not enjoy any rights,” he said. “We have heard the government has said it will hold a conference soon in Nay Pyi Taw like Panglong. If we want to end these problems [with refugees], we need to solve the political conflicts. If we want to solve these political conflicts, we need to urgently hold a conference with the participation of all parties.” He added that the conflict in Kachin State had significantly damaged national unity and needed to be halted as soon as possible. In the statement, titled Echo of Myitkyina for Kachin Peace<sup>44</sup>, the group called for sufficient supplies to be distributed to refugee camps in Kachin State and for the government to act immediately to bring peace to the region. “We deeply wish for peace discussions to be held as soon as possible with the aim of getting real peace among all nationals, to stop civil war and to shape a united nation with freedom, fairness and equality,” the statement said. Ko Pyone Cho, another 88 Generation member, said the group had listened to the “wishes and voices” of a wide cross-section of Kachin society and that “after adding all of these wishes and voices, we have reached a common agreement based on a desire for peace.”<sup>45</sup>

ANALYSIS

Cease-fire agreements at the state-level have been reached with the Mon and Kayinni armed groups, while the recent peace talks with the Kachin Independence Organisation (KIO) ended with an impasse. That being said, it would seem that years of continued fighting and (most importantly) the lack of trust between the two sides have become the main obstacles of the crisis. The government, while keen to end years of fighting, on one hand, has also been reinforcing its position in the affected areas. Such actions will not be seen as a friendly gesture nor welcomed if peace talks are to be achieved. No doubt, the recent round of peace talks will surely have served as a basis on which to further pursue negotiations in ending the conflict in northern Burma.

While the Burma's internal affairs have failed to deliver progress or success, the government has managed to attract continued visits from Canada, New Zealand, Malaysia and Belgium. A delegation from the European Parliament has visited, as has the US Special Envoy. Therefore, it would seem that the democratic changes being undertaken by President U Thein Sein are being welcomed, to a certain extent, by the international community-at-large.

The main issue now is the upcoming by-elections scheduled for 1 April. The outside world and observers alike will surely monitor the results of the by-elections as a tool to measure the present state of affairs and the sincerity of the Nay Pyi Taw administration as it embarks on implementing democratic reforms. Burma will soon be ushering in its New Year "Thingyan" on 17 April and the hope that the New Year will bring peace and prosperity. The time is now opportune for President U Thein Sein to transform his inaugural address into reality and take the country onto the path of democracy.
