THEIN SEIN TO HAND OVER USDP CHAIR, NO DATE SET

Bowing to the constitution, President U Thein Sein is to hand over leadership of the Union Solidarity and Development Party (USDP), to its current vice chairman and Speaker of the (Pyithu Hluttaw) Lower House, Thura U Shwe Mann, though no date has been set. According to a Thura U Aung Ko, a member of the CEC of the party, the election of Thein Sein as party chair in October 2012 has come under criticism on the grounds that it appeared to infringe the constitution and thus the chairmanship will be handed to Thura Shwe Mann. Aung Ko also added by saying that "the president chairs USDP, though is not involved in the party's activities due to the constitutional restrictions and therefore he (the president) will give up the chair at an appropriate time."¹⁹

LITTLE CHANGE IN NLD AS OLD GUARD STANDS FIRM

The National League for Democracy (NLD) held its inaugural congress in Yangon from 8 to 10 March and re-elected its leader Aung San Suu Kyi as party president. At the meeting, the NLD re-organized its central executive committee (CEC) with old and new members appointed at a ratio of 3:1. New faces elected to the CEC include - Aung Soe, Dr. Myo Aung, Phyu Phyu Thinn and Zo Bwae while five Arakanese NLD members were also voted into the body. Suu Kyi, who was re-elected as president of the party at the congress, said that the selection of new members was based on three main principles.

- previous relationship with the party;
- members must have adequate capacity;
- new members and ethnic members should be selected and appointed.

Suu Kyi also said that there will be specific changes in party policies in keeping with the domestic political landscape. "The party must work under the new and changeable political landscape. In the past, our approach was that of an opposition party. But now the party has to have a constructive approach," she said. The first meeting of the new CEC is expected to be held in after April 8 and is will discuss specific responsibilities of CEC members and preparations for the elections in 2015.²⁰

NEGOTIATIONS UNDERWAY FOR A THIRD POLITICAL PARTY IN MYANMAR: FEDERATED UNION PARTY

Negotiations are taking place to form a third political party that would challenge the dominance of the Union Solidarity and Development Party (USDP) and the National League for Democracy (NLD). The new party would be a coalition of ethnic parties, and would be ready to fight the 2015 elections, says the chairman of the Rakhine Nationalities Development Party, Dr Aye Maung. "Our new strategy will bring about a political party. We are in negotiation," he said. The new grouping, to be named the "Federated Union Party", would field candidates all over the country, he said. "The suggestion is that we will have to enter the fray if two big parties run in ethnic constituencies," he said. The USDP and NLD should avoid running in ethnic-minority constituencies if they really want to secure national unity, the ethnic-based National Brotherhood Federation said in their manifesto released on March 2. "This manifesto was adopted by the majority, not by any party or individual," said Shan Nationalities Democratic Party's Pyithu Hluttaw representative for Muse township U Sai Pho Aung.²¹

ANALYSIS

With little or no change in the leadership of the NLD, the acceptance by Burma's parliament to set up a commission to review the 2008 constitution has in a way provided welcome news for the democratic reform process in the country. It is indeed timely for those who have long urged for a review as well as amending the current constitution due to its undemocratic nature. However, the manner of the review process remains unclear. At the same time, it is also important to note that unravelling the constitution in its entirety or partially will neither be easy nor meet the expectations of all stakeholders. Under such circumstances, the role to be taken by parliament in leading the review process will provide Burmese parliamentarians the opportunity to prove their democratic credentials in not only shaping the future of the country but also serving its people.
