EU SEEKS DIALOGUE SAYS AMBASSADOR

At a Europe Day reception held in Rangoon on 3 May, David Lipman, Ambassador and Head of Delegation of the European Union (EU) to Thailand, Cambodia, Laos and Myanmar, reiterated that the newly installed government would be judged on its actions and that the EU would encourage progress and respond to improvements in governance. However, he did not specify the details of the measures to be taken. Ambassador Lipman said in his speech that he hoped the new government would harness its potential for the benefit of the people of Burma, who have "long dreamt of greater pluralism, peace and prosperity." He added that "while the EU has recently decided to maintain certain restrictive measures for a further period of 12 months, there is a keen willingness to develop a high-level dialogue with the Myanmar government and relevant stakeholders across the spectrum." He also stated that based on the country's development needs the EU was also ready to increase humanitarian assistance and development aid, in order to improve the social and economic conditions of the people. In 2010, the EU provided more than US$100 million in assistance for health, education, livelihoods, food security, environment and humanitarian needs.<sup>11</sup>

NUP WILL TRY TO AMEND THE CONSTITUTION AT NEXT PARLIAMENT SESSION

At a party meeting attended by 140 central committee members, the National Unity Party (NUP) has said that it will introduce legislation to amend the 2008 Constitution at the next session of parliament. While no specific details were given, the party's legal team is studying the possibilities. Other issues on the agenda included party goals, financial issues and public relations. Currently the party has over 700,000 members and in the November 2010 elections it won 64 seats, coming second to the USDP. The NUP is the official successor of the former Burma Socialist Programme Party (BSPP) which ruled the country under Ne Win from 1962 to 1988. After the 1988 pro-democracy movement, the BSPP was removed from power. Following leadership changes, it was renamed the National Unity Party.<sup>12</sup>

USDP LEADER: NOVEMBER ELECTIONS JUST A SMOKE SCREEN

At a recent meeting held in Lashio, Northern Shan State, Union Solidarity and Development Party (USDP) head Aung Thaung, a close aide of retired junta leader Than Shwe and a hardliner, told party members that last November's elections were a means to transfer power to the USDP. He said that "All the three sovereign powers: legislative, executive and judicial, have been vested in the USDP," and went on to promise that "since we have learned the strengths and weaknesses of each township, the USDP will be a runaway winner in the next elections (in 2015)." He added that since Aung San

NDF SPLIT PROBED BY UNION ELECTION COMMISSION

The Union Election Commission (UEC) is investigating the dismissal of a senior National Democratic Force (NDF) party member. Central Executive Committee member Thein Nyunt was dismissed for allegedly giving restricted information to the media. Party leader Khin Maung Swe was summoned by the UEC to help establish whether the removal was done in accordance with party rules. The UEC will also decide if Thein Nyunt can continue to operate as an MP under the NDF flag. Both Khin Maung Swe and Thein Nyunt have presented their cases to the UEC and Thein Nyunt has said that he will accept the UEC's final decision. The NDF broke away from the National League for Democracy in order to contest the November elections last year and won 16 seats.<sup>14</sup>

RAKHINE STATE CHIEF MINISTER SAYS STATE IS FOR RAKHINES AND MUSLIMS

In a recent visit to Maungdaw, the Chief Minister for Rakhine State Hla Maung Tin said that Rakhine State is a place for both Rakhine and Muslim people. He urged those attending a meeting of local officials, town elders and Maulana (religious leaders) from 12 villages in the Maungdaw region to refrain from taking part in anti-government activities and for the local populace to live peacefully with one another. The Director of the Nasaka (Border Management Unit), Lt Col Aung Gyi, also briefed those assembled on on-going local administrative matters and thanked those who had voted for the Union Solidarity and Development Party (USDP) in the elections in November 2010. The Chief Minister was accompanied by the head of USDP for Rakhine State as well as state government officials.<sup>15</sup>

ANALYSIS

The tours and visits by the Chief Ministers of State in the Regions/States in recent weeks are clear indications reflecting the new government's intentions to attempt to garner support as it strives to bring change within the country. While mere outings and visits to infrastructure projects will not be enough to convince its many critics, the authorities, on their part, will surely need to provide more substantive and concrete steps if they are to prove them wrong. The recent meetings between the Kachin State Chief Minister and the Chinese Ambassador as well as officials from Baoshan Prefecture in Yunnan Province once again reflect the importance and role of engagement order to maintain stability and cooperation at all levels. With the international community keen to judge the new government at all possible turns, the recent statement by EU Ambassador David Lipman is but a welcome step in the right direction. While the remarks may not sound pleasing to some, the intentions with which they have been conveyed would provide an opportunity for the new government to seize and engage with the EU and others in striving to promote development and bring change to the country.
